“ Miss Kuhlman was my English teacher at Parkville High School many years ago, and I can still picture her face. She instilled in me a love of literature that led to my becoming an English major in college. When I went to London after high school she told me I had to see Shakespeare performed at the Globe, so I did and it was memorable. I'm now a retired teacher with an Ed.D. And she deserves some of the credit for that. My condolences to her family, and many thanks to Miss Kuhlman for touching my life.

“Whether it be a novel, short story, memoir or poem, Jeannette Kuhlman knew how to create relevance to her students' lives. Miss Kuhlman was an outstanding teacher who influenced generations of students and teachers to aspire to a better connection between an author and reader. She emphasized a learner's ability to interpret and express their literary analysis in all genres through reflection and writing. Her students were greatly influenced by her ability to connect with young minds.” Jane Gordon, (A student and teacher who was greatly influenced by Jeanne Kuhlman)
